How to File a Complaint

Police Employee Complaint Procedure

The Granite Shoals Police Department is dedicated to providing exceptional service to its employees and citizens through a problem solving approach and commitment to excellence in the delivery of police services. Police employees are carefully selected, held to the highest standards and provided with the best training available.

When You Feel You Need To File A Complaint

Unfortunately, not every contact with our officers and employees, as with other organizations, is always totally satisfactory, and a complaint may need to be made. Upon receipt of a complaint, a written complaint is required; an internal investigation may then be initiated. The purpose of the internal investigation is the pursuit of truth. We are committed to that objective, recognizing that our agency's credibility depends on the community's belief that we can police ourselves. With that in mind, we provide the following information regarding how you can file a complaint, how a complaint is investigated, and how it is disposed of.

How To File A Complaint

First, there are basically two types of complaints-verbal and written. Verbal complaints are usually more minor in nature or the complainant does not desire to have the officer disciplined, but rather talked to about how they felt about their interaction. Written complaints are more formalized and usually involve a more serious complaint.

A person desiring to file a complaint against a police department employee can contact a supervisory member of the Granite Shoals Police Department. That member will provide an affidavit of fact, if necessary. You will be required to return the affidavit to the police department in person and sign the form in the presence of a Notary. You may be required to supply investigators with additional information. You may contact a supervisor who is certainly capable of responding to minor complaints and, if you wish, will do their best to resolve any misunderstanding without filing an official complaint.

You may talk to the Captain of Police Operations or the Office of Internal Affairs directly, if you wish, by calling the Granite Shoals Police Department during normal business hours. Once Internal Affairs receives the complaint, the complaint will be classified, and the investigation begins. Normally, cases have a three (3) week process and you will be informed as to the outcome of the investigation in writing.
